The Real Pirate

Pirate stories are fun to read.

Many pirate stories we read are about lost treasure.

Most of those stories aren't about real pirates.

Movie and cartoon pirates often look funny, but real pirates such as Blackbeard (right) looked strange, too.

Blackbeard was a real pirate.
He lived over three hundred years ago.
At that time, ships from many countries sailed all over the world.

Three hundred years ago, pirates were very busy robbing ships along the coast and islands of the New World.

Blackbeard got a job on a ship.
He liked his job, but he knew that he might have to fight off pirates.

Why did sailors become pirates?

Some things about being a sailor or a pirate were similar. Both were away from home for months at a time. Both jobs were dangerous. The main difference was in their pay. Sailors were paid very little. Pirates got to keep and share what they took from other ships!

Pirates would rob ships and share the treasure.

Blackbeard decided it was better to be a pirate!

Do You Know?

In the 1700s, boys as young as eight to twelve years old had jobs on ships.

A boy's first job might be to help a ship's officer.

Later, they learned how to help sail the ship.

🔊 Everyone Was Afraid of Pirates

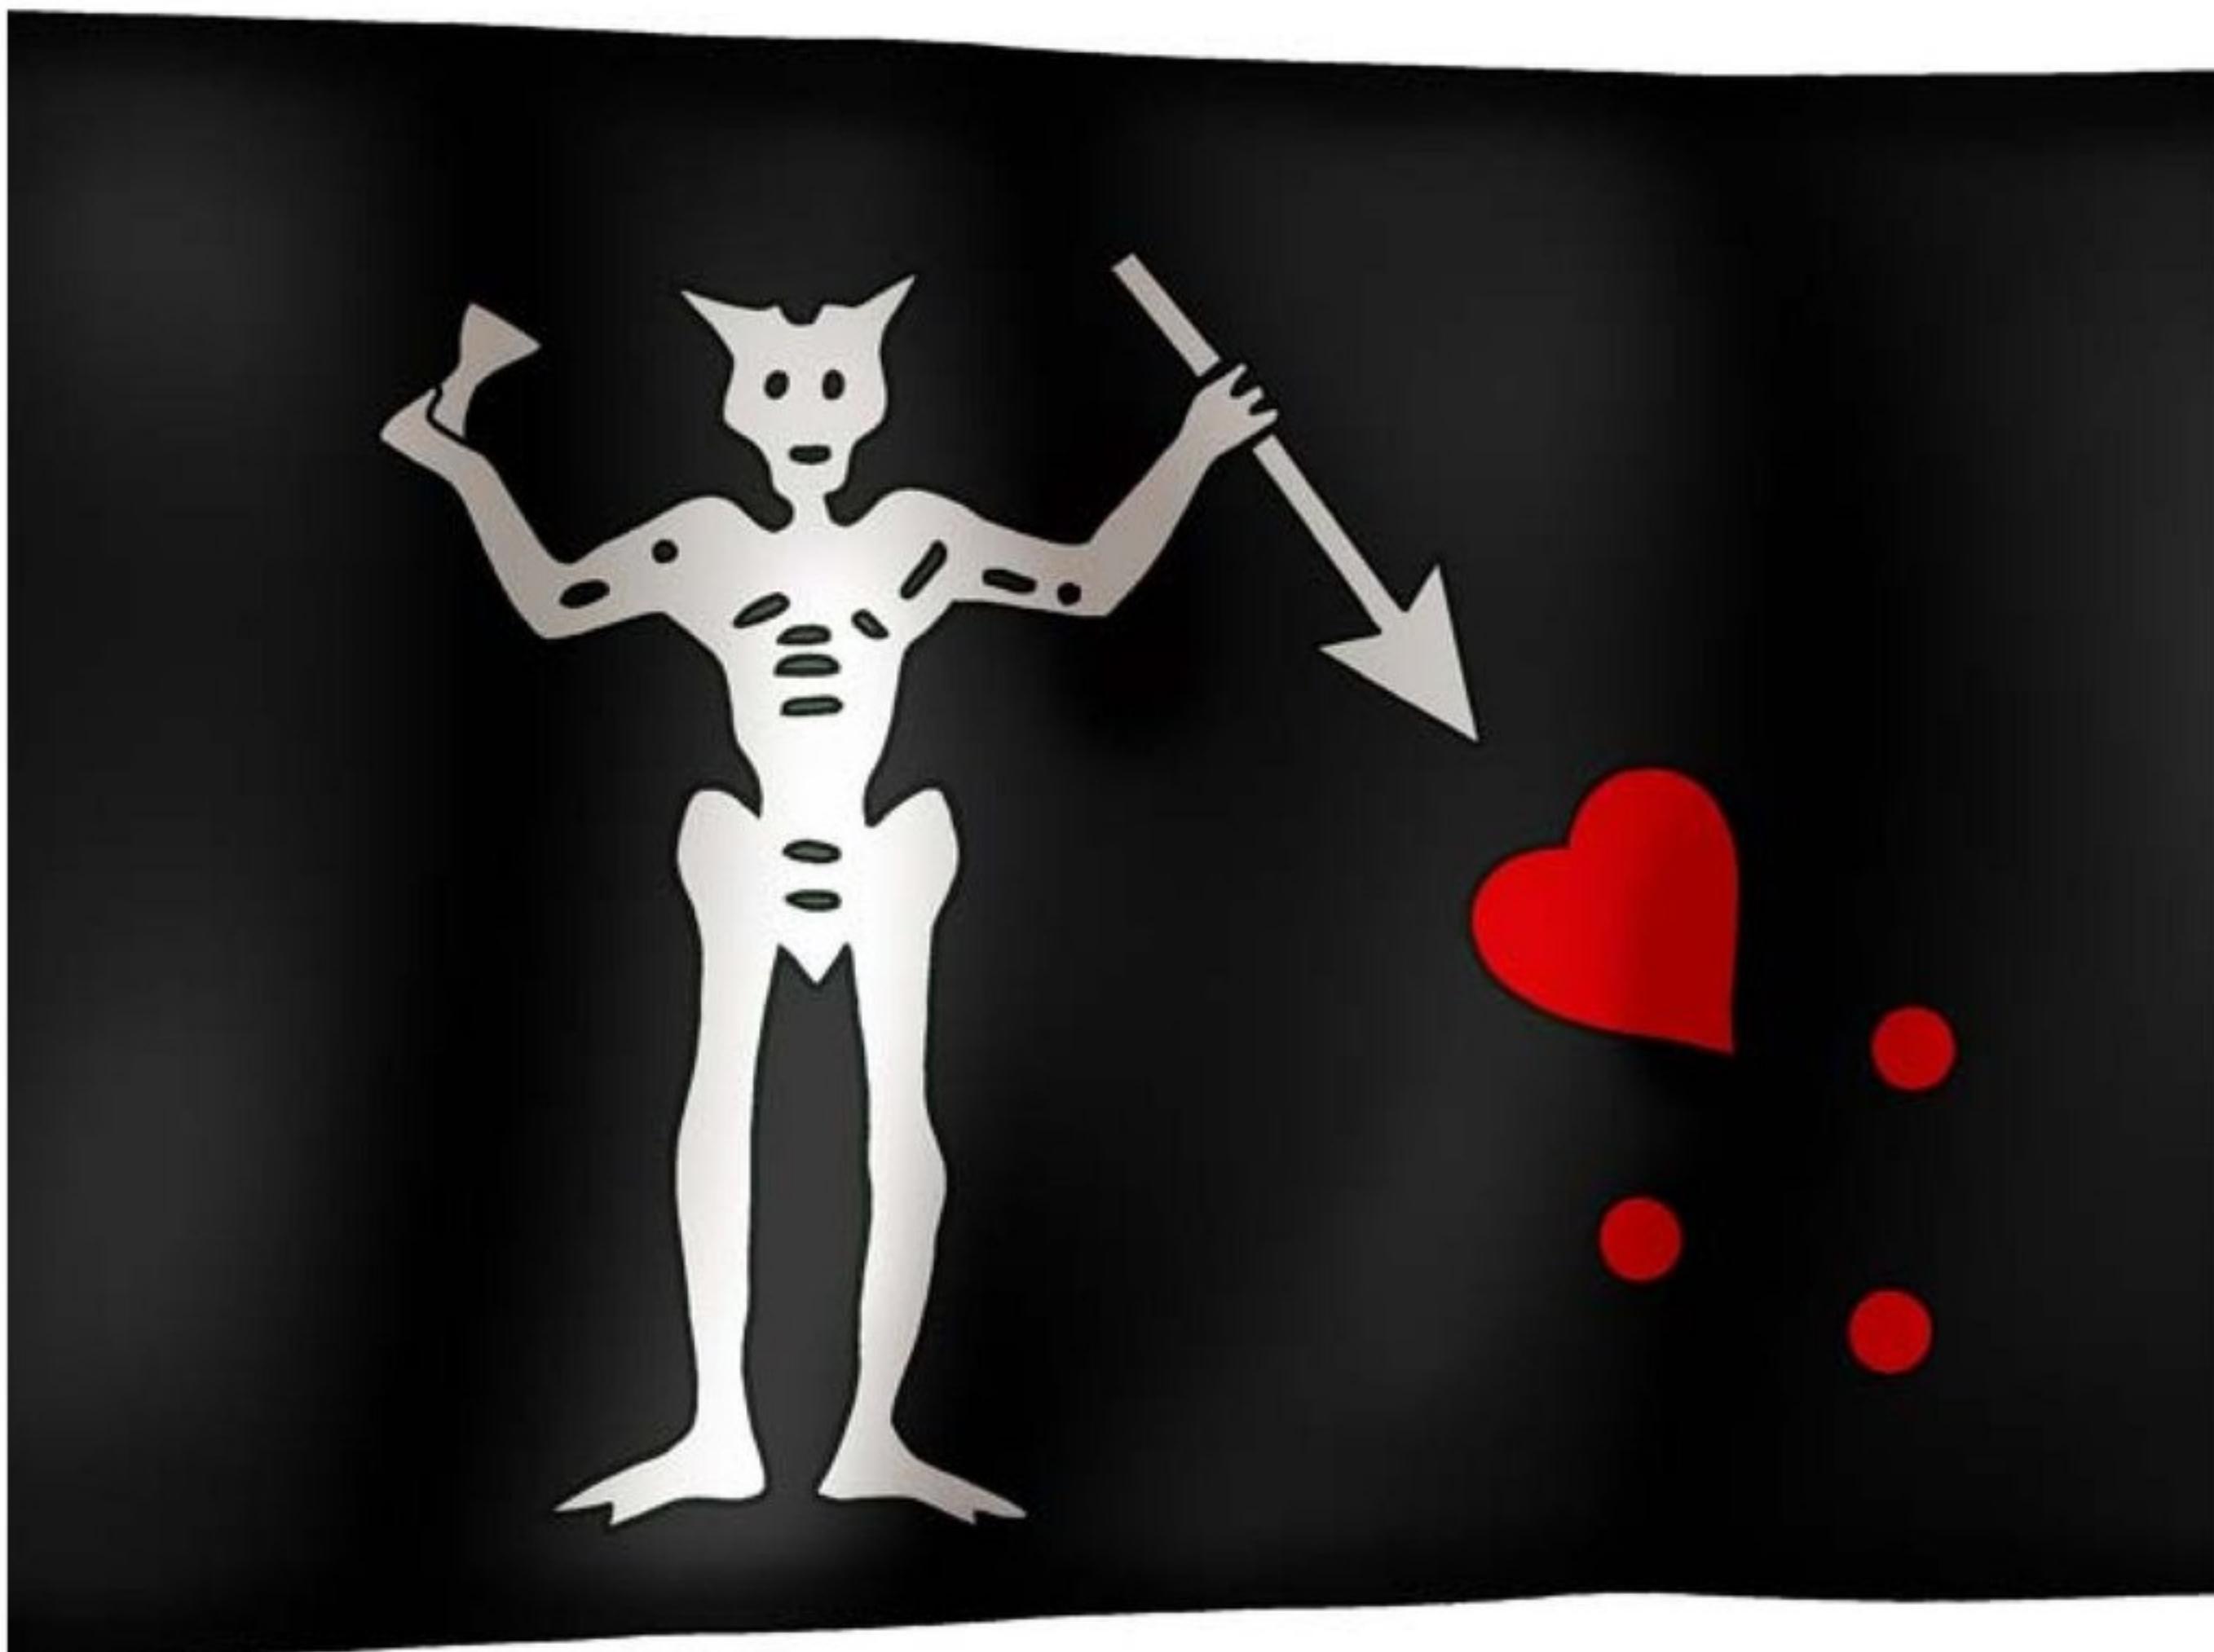

Blackbeard was a very big man.

He had a thick black beard.

People were afraid of him.

People gave up when they saw him.

Blackbeard's black flag showed a skeleton stabbing a heart and holding an hourglass. The hourglass showed that the victim only had a short time to give up or Blackbeard would attack.

► Blackbeard's pirate flag scared people, too.

His flag had a skeleton on it.
Many ships gave up when they saw his black skeleton flag.

Do You Know? ♪

Blackbeard took ships as well as treasure.

In his pirate life, Blackbeard took over forty ships.

🔊 A Pirate's Life

Blackbeard had four good ships.
One day, his best ship got stuck in the sand.
It couldn't move.

The wreck of the Queen Anne's Revenge was found near the Beaufort Inlet, off the coast of North Carolina, in 1996.

⚠ All the pirates' treasure was on Blackbeard's ship.
The pirates didn't know what to do.

Do You Know? ⚡

Blackbeard had over 350 men in his pirate crew.
They had to rob a lot of ships to support that many men.

Blackbeard thought fast.
He put their treasure on his other ships.
He sailed away with it and left many of his men behind.

Blackbeard's life was quiet for a few months.

Then, he began to rob ships again.
Many ships were sent to stop him.

Blackbeard's last battle became famous. Writers and poets made Blackbeard's life and death into a colorful tale.

🔊 Blackbeard's Last Fight

During a long ship fight, Blackbeard was shot dead.

Many stories were told about Blackbeard's life.

He became the most famous pirate of all.
